"For about a year past the men have been complaining, from time to time, of losing things. Every three months or so I'd 'get a squeal,' as they say in this business, from some-body. A couple of pairs of shoes disappeared. I can't say now who lost them. Another man reported the loss of his civilian overcont. Roundsman Larkin lost some pocket handkerchiefs and one thing and another. Finally, Officer Sheridan reported that he had lost a good chain, a searf pin, and part of a bottle of colorne. That was about the 15th of November last. Then I made up my mind I'd get to the thief. I detailed Officer John O. Savercell to watch for him. By that time it had got down so fine that I was satisfied the thelfs were perpetrated when the second platoon were in the house, in reserve. In that platoon there are thirty-six men, but there are always some sick, and the number actually on duty is thirty-one or thirty-two. I fold Savercell, who was in the first platoon, to fall in with the others when they were going on duty, and then to fall out, as the pean of the pean of the local platon, and the pean of the local platon was and to pean the pean of the local platon was and to pean of the local platon was on duty, and then to fall out, as the local platon was on duty only half the time. On two or three occasions, however, he reported to me that he had seen Officer John G. Burke preving about the house where he had no business, going into section rooms in which he did not belong. On the 7th of December it was presty cold, and Saversoll took up stairs his civilian overcoat. When he got warm, he hung it up in an empty closet in the top story. At 10:35 of that morning, he says, he saw Officer Burke go to that closet, taken a sife pocket mandacerchief from the cont hanging there, put it into his pocket, and go down stairs again. Unfortunately, he did not follow my instructions. I had toid him that when he discovered the shief, he should report at once to the Sergeant at the desk, or to me if I was in, and have the mannes and the contamination of the province of the pean of the deck in my absence, and Burke went out on post at 1 o'clock without anything being said to him about it. He came in off post at 6 o'clock. At 6:15 I called him into my room and confronted him with Officer Savercoll, who, in his presence, related what he had seen. He delead it, but admitted something eight o

Old Heads and Young Hearts" at Wallack'

The bad weather and the domestic observances incident to Christmas Eve combined to keep people away from Wallack's Theatre last evening, and but a small audience was present to witness the production of Mr. Boucicault's charming comedy of "Old Heads and Young Hearts." For the first time this season the stage looked like itself, and as the traditions of the theatre have taught the public to expect to find it. Since last summer it has been given over mainly to silliness or rubbish; disappointment has succeeded to disappointment, and if the last production which was interred with its final presentation on Tuesday evening precipitated has succeeded to disappointment, and if the last production which was interred with its final presentation on Tuesday evening precipitated the present recovery, the public owes to its undaunted author its hearty thanks.

Mr. Wallack's company seemed to breathe more freely and to be animated by a new spirit, as it recognized the better atmosphere and the more congenial material. The audience was not large, but there was enough of it to give such a warm and enthusiastic greeting to Mr. Gilbert as male the house ring again and fairly overwhelmed the veteran favorits. It is an unmixed pleasure to see this excellent actor back upon the boards, apparently enjeving a complete restoration to health, and certainly acting as well as ever is edd in his life.

There were some few deficiencies in the performance of the comedy last evening, such as are not uncommon to first representations, or such as are attributable to perhaps a slight shortcoming or two in the east. They detracted but little from the enjoyment of it, which was of the heartlest from beginning to end.

Mr. Gilbert's Jesse Kura' was a delightful bit of acting, full of delicate and tender passages that were given with charming expression and significance, and with the mingled dignity and refluement that are distinctive of his style. It was a finished and artistic impersonation, touching in its pathos, winsome in its comedy, and suble and effective in its appeal to a warmer sympathy. Mr. Beckett, in the character of Bob, appeared to better advantage than in anything clase that he has done at Wallack's. His acting was marked by an ease and soil-repression that have not herefolore been so apparent, and the lack of which have led him too often from polite comedy, by an easy and surface and transition, into grotesque buffonery. The part could not have well been better done than as he gave it last evening, and it fully instiffed the warm applause with which it was recognized.

Mr. Geraid Eyre was particularly happy in the part of Tom Coke. As a Yorkahire squire he

DESPERATE MUTINY AT SEA.

FOUR MEN KILLED IN THE ITALIAN BARK FRANCESCO DONOVARA. Iwo Spantards Undertake to Murder the Crew, and Lose their Lives after Killing the Cook and the Bontswaln-A Brave Boy.

The Italian full-rigged bark Francesco Donovara, which reached this port yesterday, after a two months' trip, was the scene at midnight on Dec. 4 of a desperate attempt at mu-ting, in which four sailors were killed. The vessel quitted Savona, Italy, on Oct. 26, with fifteen men on board, under the command of Capt. Stephano Ferrando. She had no cargo. but was under orders to come to this city for a cargo. The voyage was uneventful until the night of Dec. 4. Then two Spanish sailors who had been shipped five months before at Manila mutinied and attempted to murder the officers and all the crew and then abandon the ship, These Spaniards were young men, and were known as Pedro Gregori o Arene and Antonio Aredundo, They were natives of Manila. When the vessel reached Genon last summer, all of the crew were discharged except the Spaniards. As they had no money coming to spaniards. As they had no money coming to them and were strangers in Italy, the Captain yielded to their entreaties to be allowed to re-main on board, and, although they were not needed, they were kent and were paid sixty frances a month, as though doing full services. The vessel was ordered to Savona, where the remainder of the crew was shipped. The tothers were limitans, and the Captain though when he sailed that he had a very cheerful company.
